Our Trees

Oh! It started with a wonderful breeze
For today happened to be the festivity of trees

Out to the field marching we went,
To plant the trees down we bent.

Soiled were our hands with dirt and grime,
And it was all but an hour's time!

Years from now will look back and see,
Our young little plant in a fully grown tree!

Resilience

Once upon a golden day,
When I was nine and full of play,
With my dear ball, I danced in cheer,
Till it rolled away and disappeared.

I searched beneath the sky so wide,
In tangled bushes, deep I spied.
It lay there trapped, a distant gleam—
My heart sank low, lost in a dream.

Thorns did scratch and branches tore,
Till crimson dripped and softly poured.
A thread of red across my brow,
Yet I refused to quit somehow.

Though pain had carved its lasting trace,
And left a scar upon my face,
I held my ball with triumph bright—
A battle won through will and fight.
